Born and raised in Lithuania Dovile creates her jewellery from her central London studio. Dovile's interest in making and creating things started at the very young age and her love for drawing and painting continued to grow into more tree-dimensional objects of art and then followed by timeless pieces of contemporary jewellery.

In her work Dovile explores various mediums and uses contrasting materials including the combination of silicone and silver. She is influenced and driven by colours and textures especially that of underwater landscapes, which is seen in her work through an array of vibrant colours, unusual material combinations, patterns and textures.

Dovile's work is intricate, abstract and bold designed for unconventional people who looks for a story behind their jewellery.

Silicone pieces are hand drilled, dyed and poured into mould. All set into handmade silver attachments by Dvile in her London Cockpit Arts studio. This process makes each piece completely unique and slightly different from each other. All metal parts are made in sterling silver and are available in either yellow gold plate or black rhodium. If you would like something made in your favourite colours bespoke orders are available to create your very own unique piece. Silicone components can be made in any colour combination or ombre fade.
